

The Project

Following its acquisition by Deutsche Post World Net, DHL Express required a new corporate headquarters for its Asia Pacific Regional Office based in Singapore.

The work effort required to be delivered by Headland Project Management included all aspects of designing and building a new corporate head office from the collection and analysis of requirements, tender creation and procurement of suppliers through to design and construction.

Aside from providing an appropriate corporate headquarters for their Asia Pacific region the other major objective in this work effort was to consolidate the three regional offices that operated at different locations throughout Singapore.

Services Provided

The services provided by Headland Project Management included the following.

- Data Collection and Analysis
- Tender Creation and Procurement
- Design Management
- Project Management
- Financial Management
- Lease Negotiations
- Construction Management

Our Approach

Headland Project Management were the central source of all functional activities associated with this project and as such had to create an open and communicative style to deliver the works.

Re-locating staff into new offices is a complex and often emotional process and it was no different on this occasion. It was therefore critical to the overall success of this project that a clearly defined and communicated process was in place albeit with an empathetic approach.

The Outcome

The design and function met all of the requirements of the client and was successfully delivered including the integration of all three offices into one central location.
